

Guide to Selling a Home

● Set the Right Price

The correct listing price at the time of listing may be the single most important marketing tool you have. Research comparable sales, review market trends, or consult a professional appraiser to land on a competitive, attractive price.

● Boost Curb Appeal

Tidy up landscaping, add fresh mulch, update exterior lighting, and repaint where needed to make a strong first impression.

● Declutter and Depersonalize

Remove excess belongings and personal items to help buyers envision themselves in the space while showcasing the home's best features, unless selling lakefront, where lifestyle photos and decor help.

● Complete Small Repairs, But Don't Stress

Fix minor issues like leaky faucets, cracked tiles, or scuffed walls to show the home is well-maintained. If some repairs will cause major stress, don't bother doing them, there's a buyer for every home.

● Deep Clean Everything

A spotless home photographs better and shows better in person, pay extra attention to kitchens, bathrooms, carpets, and windows before your first showing.

● Stage for Success

Arrange furniture and décor to highlight the best features of each room, create a sense of flow, and make spaces feel warm and inviting. Sell the lifestyle, not just the space. Consider hiring a home stager to reorganize furniture and add decor as needed.

● Take Professional Photos and Video

High-quality photos and video including drone/aerial shots where applicable are often a buyer's first impression of your home. Both should also be suitable for social media. Listings with professional photography sell faster and for more.

● Market Strategically

A strong marketing plan reaches beyond the MLS social media, open houses, mailers, and targeted outreach including international and out-of-state buyers, all widen your buyer pool and create competition for your home.

● Be Flexible for Showings

The more accessible your home is for showings, the faster it tends to sell. Limiting availability can cost you serious buyers.

● Partner with a Real Estate Agent

Partner with a pro to handle all of the above and more. A true pro will make the process as stress-free and profitable as possible.

● Prepare for Closing

Work with your agent to handle paperwork, inspections, and final walkthroughs before sealing the deal.
